

Conservative and Libertarian Groups are Supporting Section 230 in the Supreme Court case, Gonzalez v. Google including conservatives such as...

Former Sen. Rick Santorum

Section 230 co-author & former Rep. Chris Cox

“The marketplace of ideas works. The growth of the internet over the past three decades has been astonishing . . . If this Court were to adopt Plaintiffs’ atextual reading of Section 230, however, that marketplace of ideas would shut down.”

- Washington Legal Foundation

“If [the Court finds for Gonzalez], platforms would be subject to liability for their decisions to present or not to present particular third-party content—the very actions that Congress intended to insulate from liability.”

- Former Rep. Chris Cox

“A ruling for [Gonzalez] would [] make it virtually impossible for platforms . . . to avoid content, like pornography and bigoted speech...this Court should not adopt a flawed interpretation of Section 230 that could, for example, subject Truth Social to ruinous litigation for recommending conservative content to its users.”

- Former Rep. Rick Santorum

